

What is claimed is:

1. A method for protection against stroke, comprising the steps of:
inserting a distal end of a catheter into a carotid artery; locating a first expandable member within a common carotid artery; 5 locating a second expandable member within an external carotid artery;
and
expanding the first expandable member to occlude the common carotid artery.